A deed to which there were twenty parties whose residences are scattered throughout the country was lodged for record in the county clerk's office Saturday. The instrument was drawn up August 31, 1906, and almost continuously since that date has been traveling from city to city for the signature of part owners of the property being conveyed. The deed itself is simple enough and covers scarcely one typewritten page, but it is followed by the oaths of seven notory publics and is consequently quite bulky. And incidentally, the fee for recording it made a five dollar bill look like a "has been."

Draught horses were a drug on the market at 72 cents each and oxen at $1.25. In the days of the second Henry $50 would have equipped a farm with three draught horses, half a dozen oxen, 20 cows and 200 sheep, leaving a balance of $2 toward the payment of the rent, which would be perhaps $5 a year.

The other side of the story comes in the following figures: Three cents a day was considered good wages. No more than four cents was ever paid in the harvest field. In many parts of South America there has been much misunderstanding of the attitude and purposes of the United States toward the other American republics. An idea had become prevalent that our assertion of the Monroe doctrine implied, or carried with it, an assumption of superiority, and of a right to exercise some kind of protectorate over the countries to whose territory that doctrine applies. Nothing could be farther from the truth. Yet that impression continued to be a serious barrier to good understanding, to friendly intercourse, to the introduction of American capital and the extension of American capital and the extension of American capital and the extension of American trade. The impression was so widespread that apparently it sion was so widespread that apparently it so Guatemala, Honduras, and Salvador."

forces for the collection of ordinary contract debts due to its citizens by other governments. We have not considered the use of force for such a purpose consistent with that respect for the independent sovereignty of other members of the family of nations, which is the most important principle of international law and the chief protection of weak nations against the oppression of the strong. It seems to us that the practice is injurious in its general effect upon the relations of nations and upon the welfare of weak and disordered states, whose development ought to be encouraged in the interests of civilization; that it offers frequent temptation to bullying and oppression and to unnecessary and unjustifiable warfare. We regret that other powers, whose opinions and sense of justice we esteem highly, have at times taken a different view and have permitted themselves, tho we believe with reluctance, to collect such debts by force. It is doubtless true that the nonpayment of public debts may be accompanied by such circumstances of fraud and wrongdoing or violation of treaties as to justify the use of force. This government would be glad to see an international consideration of the subject which shall discriminate between such cases and the simple nonperformance of a contract with a private person, and a resolution in favor of reliance upon peaceful means in cases of the latter class. "It is not felt, however, that the conference at Rio should undertake to make such a discrimination or to resolve upon such a rule. Most of the American countries of Europe are the creditors. If the Rio conference, therefore, were to tape such action it would have the appearance of a meeting of debtors resolving how their creditors which proposes to request the second Hague conference, where both creditors and debtore will be assembled, to consider the subject."

shall be above everything else a fighting man. In the army in particular it is not necessary that either the cavalry or infantry officer should have special mathematical ability. Probably in both schools the best part of the education is the high standard of character and of professional morals which it confers. But in both services there is urgent need for the establishment of a principle of sclerion which will eliminate men after a certain age if they cannot be promoted from the subordinate ranks, and which will bring into the higher ranks fewer men, and these at an earlier shall be above everything else a fighting promoted from the subordinate ranks, and which will bring into the higher ranks fewer men, and these at an earlier age. This principle of selection will be objected to by good men of mediocre capacity who are fitted to do well while young in the lower positions, but who are not fitted to do well when at an advanced age they come into positions of command and of great responsibility. But the desire of these men to be promoted to positions which they are not competent to fill should not weigh against the interests of the navy and the country. At present our men, especially in the navy, are kept far too long in the junior grades, and then, at much too advanced an age, are put quickly thru the senior grades, often not attaining to these senior grades until they are too old to be of real use in them; and if they are of real use, being put thru them so quickly that little benefit to the navy comes from their having been in them at all.

The navy has one great advantage over the army in the fact that the officers of high rank are actually trained in the continual performance of their duties; that is, in the management of the battleships and armored cruisers gathered into fleets. This is not true of the army officers, who rarely have corresponding chances to exercise command over troops under service conditions. The conduct of the Spanish war showel

The conduct of the Spanish war showed the lamenable loss of life. The sextravagance and the conduction of the sextravagance and rewarded only if they save money at no matter what cost to the efficiency of the service, and if the higher officers are given no chance whatever to exercise and practise command. For years prior to the Spanish war the secretaries of war were praised chiefly if they practised economy; which economy; especially in connection with the quartermaster, commissary and medical departments, was distinctly responsible for most of the mismanagement that occurred in the war itself—and parenthetically be it observed that the very people who clamored for the misdirected economy in the first place were foremost to denounce the mismanagement, loss, and suffering which were primarily due to this same misdirected economy and to the lack of preparation it involved. There should see the content of the content to the lack of preparation it involved. most to denounce the mismanagement, loss, and suffering which were primarily due to this same misdirected economy and to the lack of preparation it involved. There should soon be an increase in the number of men for our coast defenses; these men should be of the right type and properly trained; and there should therefore be an increase of pay for certain skilled grades, especially in the coast artillery. Money should be appropriated to permit troops to be massed in body and exercised in maneuvers, particularly in marching. Such exercise during the summer just past has been of incalculable benefit to the army and should under no circumstances be discontinued. If on these practise marches and in these maneuvers elderly officers prove unable to bear the strain, they should be retired at once, for the fact is conclusive as to their infitness for war; that is, for the only purpose because of which they should be allowed to stay in the service. It is a real misfortune to have scores of small company or regimental posts scattered thruout the country; the army should be gathered in a few brigade or division posts; and the generals should be practised in handling the men in masses. Neglect to provide for all of this means to incur the risk of future disaster and disgrace.

The readiness and efficiency of both the army and navy in dealing with the recent sudden crisis in Cuba illustrates afright their value to the nation. This readiness and efficiency would have been very much less had it not been for the existence of the general staff in the army and the general board in the navy; both are essential to the proper development and use of our military forces afloat and ashore. The troops that were sent to Cuba were handled flawlessly. It was the swiftest mobilization and dispatch of troops over sea ever accomplished by our government. The expedition landed completely equipped and ready for immediate service, several of its organizations hardly remaining in Havana over night before splitting up into detachments and going to their several posts. It was a fine demonstration of the valor The readiness and efficiency of both the ments and going to their several posts. It was a fine demonstration of the valor and efficiency of the general staff. Similarly, it was owing in large part to the general board that the navy was able at the outset to meet the Cuban crisis with such instant efficiency; ship after ship appearing on the shortest notice at any threatened point, while the marine corps in particular performed indispensable service. The army and navy war colleges are of incalculable value to the two services, and they cooperate with constantly increasing efficiency and importance.

The congress has most wisely provided for a national board for the promotion of rife practise. Excellent results have already come from this law, but it does already come from this law, but it does not go far enough. Our regular army is so small that in any great war we should have to trust mainly to volunteers; and in such event these volunteers should already know how to shoot; for if a soldier has the fighting edge, and ability to take care of himself in the open, his efficiency on the line of battle is almost directly proportionate to excellence in marksmanship. We should establish shooting galleries in all the large public and military schools, should maintain national target ranges in different parts of the country; and should in ent parts of the country; and should in every way encourage the formation of rifle clubs thruout all parts of the land. The little republic of Switzerland offers us an excellent example in all matters connected with building up an efficient citizen soldiery.

Was Headed For Heaven.

Some years ago the Hon. Elijah Morse and Abner Upham witnessed the hanging of a man at Dedham. While, they were driving home, the subject of sin and its punishment came up.

"Brother Upham." remarked Mr. Morse, who was a rigid orthodox in belief, "I suppose, according to your belief, that this man who has been found guilty of murder by his fellowmen, and hanged because he is not a At person to be at large among his kind, has now gone straight to heaven."

It is necessary to explain that the incident took place before gallows were equipped with trap doors, and it was the duty of the executioner to give the rope, fastened about the victim's neck, a tug that actually jerked the doomed man into the air.

"It is not for me to judge a fellowman, Brother Morse," replied Deacon Upham, who was an ardent Universalist, gravely, although there was a twinkle in his eye, "but I must say that the last I saw of the unfortunate fellow he was headed that way."-Boston Herald.

Two Rare Treats.

Those who attended services at the Presbyterian church Sunday morning and evening a week ago were given a rare treat at each service. Dr. C. K. Crawford, of the Louisville Presbyterian theological seminary delivered two strong sermons and everyone who heard them was delighted with in the city. Mr. Andres returned them and with his splendid delivery which was forceful and dignified. Each sentence being a gem which impressed his congregation.

How Diptheria is Contracted.

One often hears the expression, "My child aught a severe cold which developed into diptheria," when the truth was that the cold had simply left the little one particularly susceptible the wandering diptheria germ. When Cham berlain's Cough Remedy is given it quickly cure the cold and lessens the danger of diptheria of any other germ disease being contracted. The Tiephone Girl.

A New York man was "if-youpleased an yes-sired" so politely by Other Staples in Proportion a telephone operator that he called up the manager and said a good word

> "Unusual?" responded the mana ger. "Certainly the operator's politea good word for the operator. But complaints? why, there seems to be a million women in this city who have nothing else to do.

It is no temper-spoiling job -- that which the telephone operator holds. It's the same in Muskogee as in New

She is held responsible not only for her own mistakes, but for the thousands of mistakes made by other people.

You carelessly call for 1985 when what you really want is 1895, and because you get the wrong party you petulantly blame the "fool operator" and upon your severely informing her that she gave you 1985 when you asked for 1895 if she ever does it again you will complain against her, you feel slighted because she does not say "thank you."

You roughly jar your telephone and your nerves if she does not answer instantly; you think she is teasing you when she tells you the line you want is busy; and perhaps you more than half suspect that she is listening to all you say over the line. She is a sadly misjudged girl. Her work is difficult and her errors marvelously few. She has no time for unnecessary words, though she is as polite as the public will permit her

She knows that you never think of her service except when she goes wrong and never speak of her except

Yet she patiently does the best she can for you, and that is often better than you deserve.

Don't imagine you are distinguishing yourself by complaining against her. Thousands have been ahead of you. But say a word in her favor at the right place and you stand alone with an approving conscience.

Robbing Yourself

That is just what you are doing when you fail to get regular and sufficient sleep. Your body requires this unconscious period for repair work; without it your nerve energy becomes exhausted, and you are tired, worn-out, nervous, excitable; have headache, nouralgia, indigestion, poor appetife, or other ailments caused by a lack of nerve force. Make it your business to sleep. If you are restless, take Dr. Miles' Nervine; it soothes and strengthens the nerves, and brings sweet, refreshing, life-giving sleep, and gives the organs power to work naturally. Try it to-day.

"I had a severe spell of fever, which "I had a severe spell of fever, which left me in a very weak condition and very nervous. I had severe spells of headache and neuralgia, and could sleep but very little. Every effort that was made to recover my strength was of no avail until I began taking Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine. After I commenced to take the Nervine my sleep was profound and restful, and the pains in my head, as well as the neuralgia pains, left me to a certain extent and I grew gradually better."

"I only wanted to look at it," he said courteously. "I like your grit as much as I almire your beauty. Keep the ring.

She slipped it mechanically over her

"But you, my dear Mr. Comstalk!" he cried, turning his shining eyes and presently returned with a basin upon me, while his fingers deftly replaced the gems in the bag.

I have no jewelry," I replied, tossing aside the cigarette.

"But you have something infinitely better. I am rather observant. In Friard's curio-shop you carelessly ex- the light of reverence. It was a pichibited a wallet that was simply choking to death with long yellow-boys. You have it still. Will you do me the honor?"-stretching out his slim white hand.

I looked at William; he nodded. There wasn't the zlightest chance for me to argue. So I drew out my wallet. I extracted the gold-bills and made a neat little packet of them. It hurt, hurt like the deuce, to part with them. But-!

men would have flung the wallet at my head.

"Oh, he is game, sir; never you doubt it, sir," said the amiable Wil-

"I have some silver in change," I auggested with some bitterness.

Far be it that I should touch silver," he said generously, did this rogue. "Besides, you will need some thing to pay for this little supper and the fare back to New York." My bills disappeared into bis pocket. "You will observe that I trust you implicitly. I haven't even counted the money. William sniggered.

'And is there anything further?" I inquired. The comedy was beginning to weary me, it was so one-sided.

"I am in no particular hurry," the rogue answered, his sardonis smile the telephone." returning. "It is so long since I have chatted with people of my kind. I scowled.

"Pardon me, I meant from a social point of view only. I admit we would not be equals in the eye of the Presbyter.

And then followed a scene that reminds me to this day of some broken, fantastic dream, a fragment from some bewildering nightmare.

CHAPTER IX.

For suddenly I saw his eyes widen and flash with anger and apprehension. Quick as a passing sun-shadow. his hand swept the candelabrum from the table. He made a swift backward spring toward the door, but he was a little too late. The darkness he had created was not intense enough, for there was still the ruddy glow from the logs; and the bosom of his dress-shirt made a fine target. Besides, the eyes that had peered into the window were accustomed to the night.

Blang! The glass of the window shivered and jingled to the floor, and a sharp report followed. The rogue cried out in fierce anguish. and reeled against the wall. William whipped out his revolver, but, even from his favorable angle, he was not quick enough. The hand that had directed the first bullet was ready to direct the second.

All this took place within the count of ten. The girl and I sat stiffly in our chairs, as if petrified, it was all so swiftly accomplished.

"Drop it!" said a cold, authoritative voice, and I saw the vague out lines of Haggerty's face beyond the broken window-pane.

Wiliam knew better than to hesi tate. His revolver struck the floor duily, and a curse rolled from his lips. Immeriately a heavy body precipitated itself against the door, which crashed inward, and an officer fearlessly entered, a revolver in each hand. This tableau, which lasted fully a minute, was finally disturbed by the entrance of Haggerty himself.

"Don't be alarmed, Miss," he said heartily; "it's all over. I'm sorry for "Or to talk too much," supplemented his master, smiling. "Talk, my friend, rounds me up with a bulet in the arm, and a long sojourn behind stone walls. Never talk. Thank you, too, Mr. Comstalk, for the saving grace of humor. If it were possible, should like to give Miss Hawthorne he pick of the jewels. This is a sordid world.

"Ye'er car-r is coming!" shouted Moriarty, running to the window.

So the girl and I passed out of Holywood Inn, leaving Haggerty with his mysterious prisoners. I can't reason t out, even to this day, but I was genuinely sorry that Haggerty had arrived upon the scene. For one thing,

> "I know I haven't done anything especially gallant to-night; no fighting, no rescuing, and all that. They just moved me around like a piece of stage scenery.

A smile flashed and was gone. It was a hopeful sign.

"But the results are the same. You "You're a good little woman," said have admitted to me that you are the rogue, his face softening; "and a neither engaged nor married. Won't good woman is the finest thing God you take me on-on approval?" ever placed upon earth. Had I only

"Mr. Comstalk, it all seems so like a horrid dream. You are a brave man, and, what is better, a sensible one, for you submitted to the inevitable with the best possible grace. But you talk of love as readily as a hero in a popular novel."

"I never go back," said I. "It seems incredible, doesn't it, that I should declare myself in this fashion? Listen. for my part, I believe that all this was written,-my Tom-foolery in Mouquin's, my imposture and yours, the two identical cards,-the adventure from beginning to end."

(THE END.)

Her Horrid Neighbor.

"I don't like our neighbor across the hall," announced a pretty little bride in a West side apartment house. "What's the matter with her?" asked husband.

"She's so queer. Yesterday I was expecting Dr. Blank and his wife to call and I had to go out for a few minutes. I asked Mrs. Neighbor if she would keep the key to our apartment and I would pin a note on our door, telling Dr. Blank where to find it, so they could get in and wait for me. She said she would, but that I would better describe the doctor, so she would not admit burglars who might read the note.

"I told her she would be sure to know Dr. Blank, because he was a dentist and an awfully nice man; and, Howard, she laughed right in my face! What do you suppose made her do that? I don't think she's a bit nice!" -N. Y. Press.
